Oregon State UMCI - April 2024

INTERNATIONAL REPS TWO CENTS

Hi to all. I hope that all of you are getting ready for some riding, it'll be that time soon here in the Columbia Basin. I just about rode to our breakfast meeting on the 10th. I got the bike out, cleaned up and ready to go, then Sunday morning the thermometer read 32 degrees at 8 A.M., so figured at 60 miles an hour, it would be a little colder than I wanted.

We had a great meeting. There were about 12 members for breakfast and one brave soul (Richard) that rode. Lucky for him it's only 5 or 6 miles to Bob's Café, but I applaud him for riding his bike.

We did some planning for the Spring Banquet. Things are shaping up nicely. We have 25 pre-registered so far and several that plan to pay at the door. Lynette said that we would have hors d'oeuvres around 5 :00, and have time to enjoy each other's company, then eat dinner at 6:30.

We also discussed holding the Washington State Rally this year. The group felt we would hold off this year and conduct the International and the Washington State rally together next year because it will be Washington's turn next year. Please, if you have input on this, contact me, your thoughts can contribute to this decision. I want to hear from other Washington State areas.

I want to remind everyone of the things that you should look for this spring before you hit the road. I know that everyone is ready to ride, but is your motorcycle? Just a couple of things to check before starting out (I'm sure all of you know these things but a refresher never hurts.)

1. Make sure your tires are in good condition before starting a ride. Ensuring there are no embedded objects or bulges. Monitoring tire wear contributes to a safer ride. It's also a good idea to check the tire pressures, especially when it's cold outside, to make sure they have enough air.

While you're looking at the tires, take a look at the wheels to make sure everything looks in order. Keep an eye out for bent, broken or missing spokes, for instance, and watch for excessive grease, which may indicate a cracked seal. Finally, check your brake pads and discs for wear, and make sure both brakes work.

The Sparkplug

Oregon State UMCI - April 2024

2. It's important to know that each of your bike's controls are in working order each time you ride. Check that your hand grips are securely in place and that your handlebars are straight and turn easily. Make sure your throttle operates smoothly and doesn't make a revving sound when you turn the handlebars. Test your levers and pedals too, to ensure they're properly adjusted and have no bends or cracks. And don't forget to look over your cables and hoses for visible damage such as cuts or kinks.
3. Your motorcycle relies on a number of fluids to keep it running. Before hitting the open road, check that your bike has enough fuel, engine oil, coolant, hydraulic and transmission fluids. Also, take a look at your bike's gaskets, seals and hoses to make sure there are no signs of fluid leaks.
4. It's also a good idea to make sure the body of your bike is in good condition. Check for cracks in gussets and make sure there's no damage to accessory mounts. Test your bearings and bushings too, by pushing and pulling swingarm and forks to make sure they are properly functioning. Don't forget to take a look at the chain or belt to make sure it has the right tension and that the chain is lubricated and the teeth are engaging.
5. In addition to ensuring your bike runs well, it's important to make sure it can support itself when you end your ride. Take a look at the condition of the center and side stands — if they are cracked or bent, you may want to get them repaired. Also make sure the springs have enough tension to hold your bike upright.

I realize that this is a lot longer than normal, I hope that you will bear with me. I just want to make sure that everyone is safe and that this will be one of the best riding seasons of your life. There are lots of opportunities to ride this year. Please take advantage of as many of them as you possibly can.

We hope to see you at the Spring Banquet or at one of the campouts or the International, either way it is our pleasure to call you a friend.

Sincerely Kevin and Kevi

RIDE SAFE RIDE LOTS AND MOST OF ALL HAVE A TON OF FUN!!

RIDE BESIDE ME BE MY FRIEND!!

April 2024 Wasconian Tidbits – Ben Altman

Hope all is well with everyone!

We are now back (or I guess it should be ahead) to daylight savings time. With the switch it is now still light out at 7:30 PM. But, on the other end, it doesn't get light in the morning until 7:00 AM.

Weather Report

Monday (19th) started out with an hour of heavy snow, then a little rain (.14 inch). Then Tuesday it warmed up into the 40s. Tuesday started out at 39° and very foggy, it made it into the 50s, with the warmer weather continuing through the weekend, with no additional rain. Friday started out with clear blue sky at 30°, but was up to 50° by noon, excellent! The mountains (Adams & Rainier) were out in all their snow-covered glory, first time in several weeks that they have been visible.

The month ended with rain on the 29th (.18"). Total rainfall for February was .78 inch, plus 9 inches of snow.

Total rain from October through February was 7.30 inches, not counting snow.

March 1st started out cloudy, with a light drizzle around noon, but nothing measurable, then we had a bit of sun. Then there was a spritz of snow overnight, with 29° starting out Saturday morning, but some sun. It got up to 42° then dropped 10° and started snowing. It only snowed for about 20 minutes then the sun came back out.

Monday March 11th started out with mostly clear sky, but only 33° with a light wind. It made it up to 53°, then we had .03 inch of rain late evening. Tuesday started out a few degrees warmer, but only got to 48° with a mix of some sun, some wind, actually a lot of wind up to 30 mph and a bit more rain .01 inch. It was nice and sunny the rest of the week, but still cold nights at 28° - 32°. Clear skies made for nice clear views of the mountains for several days in a row. Our first 70° day was Sunday (72°) for St. Pat's followed by 3 more 70° days.

Meteorology 101

It looks like El Niño's bratty little sister La Niña is pushing her brother out of the Pacific.

BY TOM DI LIBERTO
PUBLISHED FEBRUARY 8, 2024

On a brisk early February morning, all of us El Niño-Southern Oscillation (ENSO) forecasters emerged from our burrows and saw our shadows. That can mean only one thing: conditions are favorable for the development of La Niña within the next six months. Yes, the February ENSO Outlook officially announces that we are in a La Niña Watch, even while, at the current moment, the Pacific Ocean remains in an El Niño.

The outlook gives a 79% chance that El Niño will transition to ENSO-Neutral by the April-June period, and then a 55% chance the Pacific transitions into La Niña in June-August. Confused?

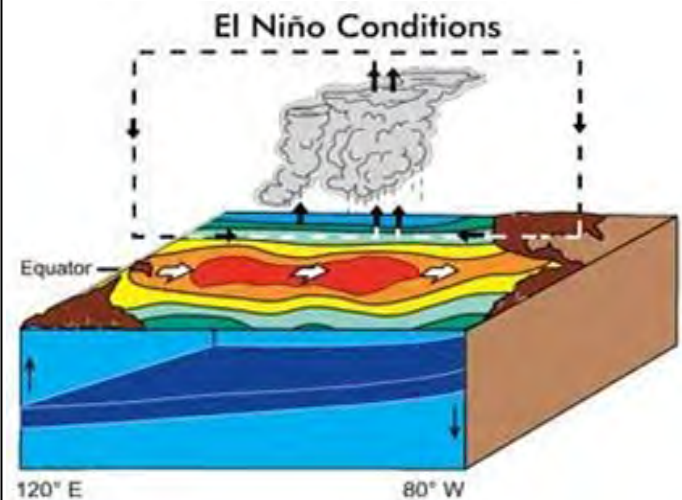

Simplistically, during an El Niño a large part of the Pacific turns warmer than normal.

Where is this all going?

That's the million-dollar question. The seasonal prediction models that forecasters look to for guidance are pretty confident in a transition from El Niño to ENSO-neutral sometime during the northern hemisphere spring 2024. Following that, there is a general consensus among the models that La Niña will follow during the summer. Now when it comes to transitions, there is always a bit of uncertainty on the exact timing, as an El Niño can end in a hurry. After all, the current outlook has only a two-season difference between the end of El Niño (79% chance in April-June), and the start of La Niña (55% chance in June-August). And some of the influencers of that transition can be atmospheric patterns that are not forecastable this early on, like the Madden-Julian Oscillation or random weather events.

The Difference Between El Niño And La Niña, And How They Impact Global Weather And Climate Patterns

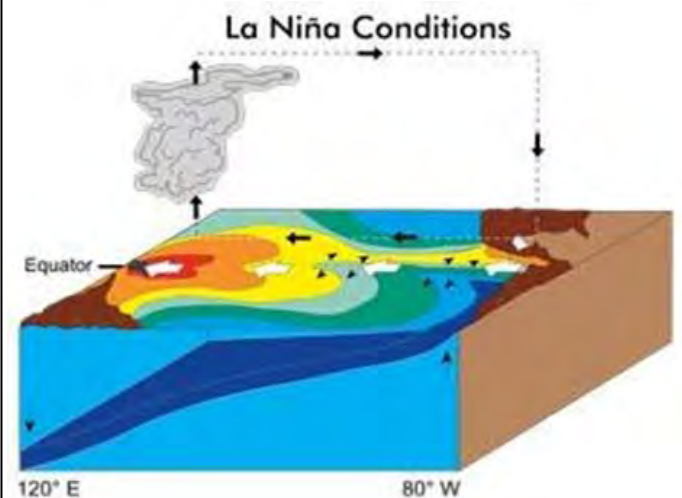

What Is El Niño?

El Niño can be summarized as a series of unusual weather patterns and events that are caused by the warm waters of the Pacific Ocean that deviate away from its normal flow.

Instead of compounding close to the Southeast Asian coast, as is usually expected, the warm waters flow eastwards around the equator and accumulate near the northwestern coastline of South America. This has a profound effect on the weather.

What Is La Niña?

La Niña can be summarized as the weather and climate patterns that are formed as the result of warm water being shifted further away from the west coast of South America in the direction of the Southeast Asian coast.

This causes colder than usual water to rise up near the west coast of South America. As a result, the Central and Eastern Pacific Ocean is a few degrees colder than usual.

In the same manner as El Niño, the change in temperature also has a significant effect on global weather and climate.

La Niña can be seen as the counterpart or opposite of the El Niño phenomenon. The weather created is just very different from that of the El Niño effect, which is a result of the much colder water temperature.

What Is The Difference Between El Niño and La Niña And Their Impact On The Weather?

By defining what precisely El Niño and La Niña are, how they are formed, and the impact each one has on local and global weather and climate, this question has already been mostly answered.

However, it will be useful to list some of the key differences Between The Two Phenomena:

El Niño is a Spanish term meaning "little boy," while La Niña is also a Spanish term meaning "little girl."

El Niño is associated with warmer water in the Pacific Ocean along the equator, while La Niña is associated with colder than usual water temperatures in the Central and Eastern Pacific Ocean.

El Niño is characterized by high-pressure systems over the Western Pacific, while La Niña is characterized by low-pressure systems over the Eastern Pacific.

Trade winds die down or change direction during El Niño cycles, while it strengthens during La Niña cycles.

In the Pacific Ocean, warm water suppresses the upwelling of deeper waters during El Niño cycles, while cold water stimulates the upwelling of deeper waters during La Niña cycles.

Heavy rains over the west coast of South America are associated with El Niño cycles, while dry conditions are experienced over the region during La Niña cycles.

Areas in Southern Africa and Australia experience very dry conditions during an El Niño cycle, while more humid conditions are experienced during a La Niña cycle.

If the switch to La Niña occurs this summer, we can expect warmer than normal temperatures. However, La Niña's effect on next winter may be a bigger concern.

The National Weather Service is 55% confident in El Niño transitions to La Niña by June through August 2024. If that prediction comes true, then the Pacific Northwest could be in for a potentially wet and cooler than average 2024-2025 winter season.

Switch to Daylight Time

Well as of March 10th we are back, or I should say, ahead on Daylight time.

However, the Oregon Legislature now has a pending Bill that would make Pacific Standard Time permanent, if it passes. There was a previous Bill passed a few years ago, but it would have made the permanent switch to Daylight Time and required Washington and California to also join in. Because of the multi-state linkage, it also required US Congressional approval, which has never happened.

The new Bill applies only to Oregon and does not require US Congressional approval. So, maybe it will happen if it can make it through the session. So far, the bill is struggling, given a concern about Oregon being separated from California and Washington relative to the clock. The debate also includes discussions of which is better long-term Standard or Daylight time. So far, Standard Time is winning the debate, but it's still linked with California and Washington.

Activity Report

February 19: It was Wasco Coffee group this morning. There were only 4 of us this morning, but we solved all the country's woes in short order.

February 23: Well, this morning I got the early warning message (kinda like an Amber Alert, well more like a Silver or Gray Alert) that Mary Nordby is headed home from Bouse, Arizona.

February 25: Well Mary arrived home about 8:45 PM

February 26: It was Wasco Coffee group this morning, with Mary attending after her extended absence. There were 6 of us this morning. Everyone was glad to see Mary back.

Sunday March 3: It was only 25° this morning for the drive down to Rufus for the Mid-Columbia breakfast at Rufus, but nice and warm in the truck! This morning it was Bernice, Mary, Klickitat John, CZ and me, also a full house. To our Surprise and delight some guy from Goldendale bought our breakfasts on his way out. Thanks much to whoever he was! That was the second time someone had bought our breakfasts.

Monday March 4: Mary & I went to Monday coffee at the Old School this morning. We had 7 attending.

Tuesday March 5: I had a Chiropractor appointment over on the west side (Lake Grove) today. So, we did a bit of shopping and then met CZ for lunch at Chick-fil-a.

Thursday March 7: Mary & I head southeast to Spring City, Utah. We took her trailer to the place Steve Close got his Sheep Camp trailer. She wants to get two larger windows installed so she can see out, when sitting in her chair. With the current windows she must stand up to see out.

They had to order the windows, which will take 2-3 weeks then additional time to install them. So, we left the trailer there and she will go back to get it when it is ready in 3-4 weeks.

On the way back we stopped Saturday afternoon at Dick Burnam's. Maralee joined us and we took them out to dinner. We stayed the night at Dick's, then Sunday morning Maralee bought us breakfast in the morning. After eating and continuing visiting, we headed home.

The weather and roads were good for the whole trip. When I say good, the roads were dry and clear of snow, but some of the roads were really rough with many potholes, some pretty large.

Monday March 11: Mary & I went to Monday coffee at the Old School this morning. We had 6 attending this morning.

We didn't actually expect to be back, but we left for

Utah Thursday instead of our original plan of leaving Sunday.

Sunday March 17: We drove into The Dalles to do some shopping. On the return, we stopped at Bob's Steak House in Rufus for St. Pat's corned beef & cabbage dinner.

Coming Up:

Sunday April 7: Mid-Columbia breakfast at Rufus.

Saturday & Sunday April 27-28: Spring Banquet in Othello, Washington

Tygh Valley 2024 – Dates Correction

Please remark your calendars - Tygh Valley campout this year will be Friday, August 30th thru Monday, September 2. Early arrival Thursday August 29th, Departure Monday September 2, or whenever. This will be the 38th year.

The schedule will be similar to the last couple of years including the Fire District Breakfast at Wamic. The menu has not yet been finalized, stay tuned...

South Region

Hi Friends,

Just thought I would send greetings from the Roseburg area.

Nothing special lately, I was able to take the trike out for a little spin. Thirty, sometimes 60 mile loop. The hills are turning green, the lambs are running, jumping, eating or taking a nap like me, every chance. We had 3 inches of snow last week. There's still snow on the hills to the east and west.

I saw over 12 ft. of snow at Crater Lake Lodge online, Diamond Lake is up to 9 ft. Half of that in the last 2 weeks. Boy, we will need that in just a few months.

There was too much snow on I-5 last Saturday, when I headed to Grants Pass for the meeting. Well call me chicken, but I don't like putting on CHAINS to see FRIENDS. That's twice I couldn't go this winter. I didn't go to Grants Pass this winter twice, in January and now in March.

Today, 9 ft. of snow was at our meeting at Abby's. It was 44 degrees this AM, which is up 14 degrees from yesterday. But, it was RAINING so everyone left their motorcycles home. It was GREAT to have CZ here from up north. I figured it was his white TESLA in the parking lot. Shortly after Evernden and I arrived, Judy and Gary Baker dropped in. Jeff Mason, Gary and Lyn Miller were already there. Soon Duane Huff came in.

Gregg Weber wasn't there, so we thought we might win, so we had 50/50. Millers won $10. Actually, they won twice, but Lyn said draw again. So I won $10 and Jeff won $6. Gregg you can't win if you don't show.

We mess with the clocks AGAIN TONIGHT! WHY ????????

GOD BLESS YOU ALL ! Get your rides ready for another RIDING SEASON.

Zack Hoffman

Medford/Grants Pass

As I am writing, it is St. Patrick's Day, and a beautiful, warm Sunday. Earlier today I took the dog walking and I saw people out riding motorcycles everywhere. In fact the past 4 days have been very nice here with more and more motorcycles out every day.

Last Friday, 6 of us turned out for a burger (or breakfast as it turned out) ride. It was still winter and the time had just changed, so when I left my house to meet up at our 10:30 ride time, it was 40 degrees out. I dressed for it, although everything felt tight and cold.

My gloves, boots, my jacket, even my bike felt tight. It was a nice, brisk ride to meet up. Then we rode out to Shady Cove, about a 100 miles round trip for me. The weather quickly warmed up and it turned out to be a great ride!

Spring is coming and I am looking forward to more good riding.
